What Is The Difference Between Clear Internal And External Upstand?

All of our rooflights are based on the clear internal measurement, this is equal to the exact clear glass and natural light you will receive – what we quote is what you get.

If a rooflight is quoted using the external upstand measurement, the amount of clear glass and natural light is significantly less.

Why?

The image on the right shows how the external upstand measurement includes the width of the upstand, which reduces the amount of clear glazed area.

Upstand widths can vary depending on the manufacturer and the type of rooflight, so you can't be sure of the natural light you receive.

For this reason, it's important to us that we use the clear internal measurement – reflecting the actual size of clear glass and natural light you get.

Installation pitch

Vario by VELUX can be installed in roof pitches from 0° up to 15°. A minimum of 5° installation pitch is recommended to avoid ponding water on the glass surface.

Rooflight solutions

Rooflight solutions
I was sourcing rooflights for a new extension, and given the hot summer was looking for some that looked good, provided ventilation and also shade. Vario provides all these solutions, with a tailor made approach to what you need. Their customer services are second to none. Always happy to help, and talk things through, and I couldn't be happier with the solution we have found thanks to Vario.

Excellent, Efficient Service

Hello there, I wish to recommend the service that the Vario service team at Velux provided to us. They were extremely helpful, providing written instructions for installation for our engineer and builders to study. If their technical experts were unavailable, they returned our calls the following day. We had a particularly large triple glazed velux unit to install weighing close to 400kg and as I said all the staff seemed to be very keen to know if the installation went well. I think this gave us great confidence and trust in this company and we would certainly use them again. You also got the feeling if there was a problem, they would do their best to help and not run for the hills...thank you Tim & Trish Coughlan, West Cork, Ireland
